INTRODUCTION

Jain Center of Cincinnati-Dayton, founded in 1978, aims to promote the practices and doctrines of Jainism among Jains in the area and to provide information and understanding to those interested in principles of Jainism.

Jainism is an ancient religion originating from India. A Himalayan Valley Prince, honorifically titled 'Mahavira', is credited as the founder of Jainism, over 2500 years ago. Interestingly however, Mahavira practiced the teachings of an ascetic monk named Parshvanath who preceded him by some 250 years. Parshvanath had molded his life after twenty-two of his predecessors. Thus the roots of Jainism date back to the very first teacher named Adinath, thousands of years ago. Jainism is founded upon the strictest form of non-violence.

The term 'Jain' was adopted for the followers of 'Jain', (meaning the one having attained a complete conquest over his/her body and mind) namely the 'Mahavira'. The present day Jainism was formulated with documented cannons and scripture 980 years after the death of Mahavira in 527 B.C.

We are proud to be the followers of such fine principles to guide our daily lives. There are some ten million Jains in the world today. Over twelve thousand Jains presently reside in the North American Continent.

QUEEN TRISALA WITNESSES FOURTEEN GEAT DREAMS

With the foetus of Bhagavān Mahāvīra in her womb, the holy queen Triśalā witnesses the following fourteen auspicious objects in her dream: — (1) a lion, (2) an elephant, (3) a bull, (4) goddess Laksmī, (5) a pair of garlands, (6) the Moon, (7) the Sun, (8) a flag, (9) a silver jug, (10) a lake with lotuses, (11) the milky ocean, (12) a divine aerial car, (13) a heap of jewels and (14) a smokeless fire. The queen narrated the dream to the king and asked him what it augured. The king as well as the dream-interpreters predicted that the queen would give birth to an illustrious son destined to be a Tirthamkara in this very life. Queen Trisalā, of Vāsistha Gotra, was the sister of king Cetaka of Ksatriya caste who ruled over the democratic state of Vaisālī, the capital of Videha. King Siddhartha and queen Trisalā were both followers of Bhagavān Pārsvanātha's Sramana traditon. Queen Trisalā became the 'Universal Mother' because she gave birth to the twenty-fourth Tīrthamkara.

CANDAKAUSIKA — A DEADLY COBRA ENLIGHTENED BY MAHĀVĪRA

A monk died in a fit of anger and was born as a cobra. As eyes emitted venom, anything coming within the sphere of his vision succumbed to the deadly poison. Therefore no one used to cross the forest which was its habitat. Bhagavan Mahavīra knew this by his divine knowledge and in order to enlighten the cobra by his universal love he entered the forest and stood motionless in meditation by the place where the cobra resided. The proud king-cobra rushed out of its hole, hissing and gazing at Bhagavān Mahāvīra. But he stood motionless and unperturbed. Blind with rage, the cobra bit him on the toe. But milk-like blood started flowing from the toe. Bhagavān Mahāvīra cast a gentle glance and said, "O Candakaúsika, be enlightened and attain peace of mind." The words had magic effect. Repenting sincerely for the past sins, he renounced violence.

ACCEPTING ALMS FROM CANDANABALA ON FULFILMENT OF THE VOWS

During the twelfth year after initiation Bhagavān Mahāvīra entered the city of Kauśāmbī after a long penance. He would accept alms (Bhiksā) only from the donor who fulfilled his ten untold conditions. He would accept an Udīd preparation from the corner of a winnowing basket, given by a person with one leg on the threshold and the other outside, who was a princess turned into a slave, who had a shaven head and whose legs were bound by chains. She must be a chaste woman, performing the penance of Atthama (three days' fasts), and should serve him after all mendicants had left and with tears in her eyes. Five months and twenty-five days elapsed, but no donor fulfilled these conditions. Candanabālā, a princess, sold as a slave, shackled and shaved by the jealous wife of a rich merchant, fulfilled all the conditions except weeping. Bhagavān Mahāvīra turned his face away at the last moment without accepting her humble alms. This made Candanabālā weep and the last condition being realized. Bhagavān Mahāvīra accepted the alms.

EARS PLUGGED WITH PEGS AND THEIR REMOVAL BY PINCERS

Once Bhagavān Mahāvīra was standing motionless, absorbed in deep meditation, on the outskirts of the village Chhammāni. A cowherd left his oxen near him and asked him to keep an eye on them. When he returned, he did not find the cattle and so he inquired about the missing cattle. When he received no reply to his persistent queries, he became furious and plugged hard wooden pegs in the ears of Bhagavān Mahāvīra. The saint bore all the pain patiently. From there, Bhagavān Mahāvīra went to Pāvā. In the course of his begging round, he entered the house of a rich merchant named Siddhārtha, who was then sitting in the company of an eminent physician named Kharaka. The physician immediately realised from the facial expression of Bhagavān Mahāvīra that he was suffering from some acute pain. He was persuaded with great difficulty to undergo the operation. He was made to sit in a basin filled with oil, given a massage and then the pegs were removed by means of pincers. The pain was so excruciating that even Bhagavan Mahavira cried out in agony.

MY PRAYER

(The English Translation of Meri Bhavna)

ledge of the whole world and who has discoursed upon the teachings of the Right Path of Liberation (for the benefit) of all in a quite hatred and other sensual temptations, who has gained the know-(The Spiritual Conqueror), who has vanished unselfish manner. (You may call Him either by the name of) Buddha; Vira; Jina; Hari; Hara; Brahma or independent (Deity). Enamoured by devotion to (that Spiritual Conqueror) my mind may remain absorbed in Him and Him only!

whose only possession is mental equanimity, who remain engaged always, day and night, in bringing about the good for their own-(Those ascetics; who) have no desire for sensual pleasures; selves and for others as well; Who always undergo the penance of self-sacrifice without any regret—such learned ascetics remove the multitude of troubles of the world

May I ever have their good company and may I ever keep (2) them in mind. May my heart be always engrossed and inclined to adopt the rules of conduct, which they observe !

May I never hurt and harm any living being; may I never 9 speak a lie. May I never be greedy of wealth or wife of another. May I ever drink the nectar of contenment!

May I never entertain an idea of egotism; nor may I be angry with anybody! May I never become jealous on seeing the worldly prosperity of other people. May my thoughts and feelings be such that I may always act in a simple and straight-forward manner. May I ever, so far as I 8 can, do good in this life to others.

May I always have a friendly feeling towards all living beings of the world and may the stream of compassion always flow from my heart towards distressed and afflicted living beings.

be so May I never become fretful towards bad, cruel and wicked persons. May I keep tolerance towards them. disposed !

May my heart be over-flowing with love at the sight of the virtuous and may I be happy to serve them so far as possible. (11) May I never be ungrateful (towards anybody); nor may I qualities of other persons and may I never look at their faults. (12) revolt (against anybody). May I ever be appreciating the good

Whether anybody calls me by bad or good name; whether wealth comes to me or goes away from me, whether I may live for millions of years or meet death this very day. Or whether anybody terrifies me or tempts me in any way still may my steps never swerve from and tresspass the Righteous Path! May my mind neither be puffed up with joy, nor it may become nervous in pain and grief. May it never be frightened even of a mountain, a river, a cremation ground or a terrible forest. (15)

May my mind remain always steady and firm, unswerving and unshaken; may it become stronger everyday. May I bear and endure with patience the deprivation of dear ones and occurrence of undesired evils. May all living beings of the world be happy! May nobody ever feel distressed! May the people of the world renounce enmity, sin, pride and sing the songs of joy every day.

home! May evil deeds be scarce! May (people) increase their knowledge and conduct and thereby enjoy the blessed fruit of human birth. May Dharma (TRUTH) be the topic of house-talk in every

May dearth and dreed never spread in the world and may the rains be timely! May the Ruler be righteous and may he administer justice to his subjects.

May disease and pestilence never spread, may the people live in peace, may the highest religion of Ahimsa (Non-Injury) pervade the whole world and may it bring about universal good! May universal love pervade the world and may ignorance of attachment remain far away. May nobody speak unkind, bitter and harsh word

May all become "Hero of the age" heartily and remain engaged in elevating the Cause of Righteousness. May all gain the sight of Truth called Vastu-swarupa (Reality of substance) and they may bear with pleasure, trouble and misfortunes!
